In either case, turn over the bridge in the centre of the village by the White Church (signed as the B827 to Braco), and turn left at the roundabout after about 400 metres into Barrack Road. Alternatively, from the South, follow the B827 from Braco (just off the A9, North of Stirling and Dunblane) into Comrie, and turn right at the first roundabout encountered into Barrack Road. The last buildings on the left are The Cottage and Ruchil House.

Comrie

Comrie is an attractive village – winner of its category in the Britain in Bloom competition in 2003. The river Earn flows through the centre, and there are high-quality local amenities available – an excellent butcher, delicatessen, general stores, pubs and restaurants among others. See the village website for further information. (www.comrie.org.uk)

Opportunities are available locally for walking, fishing, cycling, sailing and many other pursuits – Comrie has its own nine-hole golf course, for example.

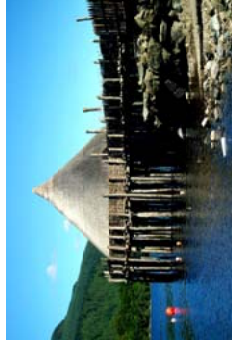

Auchingarrich Wildlife Centre is among the excellent visitor attractions within easy reach of the village.

Perthshire

Comrie provides an excellent centre for exploring Perthshire. Lochs, mountains, picturesque villages and towns abound, and there are many opportunities for walking, climbing, fishing, golfing, sailing, windsurfing etc.

There is a great deal to see and do, in all weathers, with many attractions specifically designed for visitors, such as the Crannog Centre on Loch Tay.

The Cottage, Ruchil House

The Cottage and House were built in 1747 to house troops in the time of General Wade just after the 1745 rebellion. The Cottage retains the thick stone walls of that period, but has been extensively modernised internally. The accommodation comprises :

- A large entrance hallway
- Two well-appointed bedrooms, one double and one with bunk beds (or a single if required)
- A recently-upgraded bathroom, with bath and high-pressure shower
- A comfortable sitting room, with living-flame gas fire, television, video and hi-fi
- A large and light kitchen/dining room, with gas hob, electric oven, microwave, fridge/freezer, washer/dryer and dishwasher. Double doors open out to the patio and an attractive secluded garden.

The property has full gas central heating, and linen and towels are provided. Off-street parking is available. A wireless network allows Internet access via Ruchil House's broadband connection to those with a wireless-enabled laptop computer.

We regret that no pets are allowed, and you should also note that the Cottage is a no-smoking area.
